

If the broadcast flag is implemented, the current content industry would not only be safeguarded from competition from amateurs but also effectively have control over what is broadcast and how it is broadcast. No one ought to be excluded from being able to use their own tools to broadcast their own materials. The most essential rights and interests in a free society are those of the public and not those of industries. Citizens are not just consumers, and granting concessions to so-called "professionals" to increase their profit margins at the expense of freedom is despicable.
